Travel west from Lagos to Badagry, one of Nigeria's most important heritage towns and a major centre for understanding the transatlantic slave trade, early Christianity and coastal history.

Badagry Heritage Museums.

Visit the scheduled heritage museums and interpretive sites that preserve objects, records and stories connected with Badagry's role in the slave trade and the lives of people affected by it.

First Storey Building.

See Nigeria's first storey building, completed in the nineteenth century and closely associated with the early Christian missionary presence in the country. The landmark connects Badagry's local history with the wider story of education and Christianity in Nigeria.

Boat Crossing to Gberefu Island.

Cross the lagoon by boat to Gberefu Island, following the water route connected with the final stages of the historic slave journey from Badagry toward the Atlantic coast.

Slave Route & Point of No Return.

Lekki Arts & Crafts Market.

Browse a lively market known for carvings, textiles, jewellery, leatherwork, paintings and handmade souvenirs. It provides direct contact with Nigerian craft traditions and the commercial creativity surrounding them.

Travel from Lagos to Abeokuta, the historic Egba city whose identity is inseparable from Olumo Rock and the textile traditions that have made the city famous for indigo-dyed Adire.

Olumo Rock.

Visit the great granite outcrop that served as a place of refuge for the Egba people during periods of conflict in the nineteenth century. From the rock, views across Abeokuta help explain the city's name and its development around this important natural landmark.

Explore the character and history of the city beneath the rock, gaining context on Egba heritage, settlement and the enduring cultural identity of one of southwestern Nigeria's most significant historic centres.

Adire Market Experience.
